

CATAPULT Workshop for LSP Teachers

LSP teachers or any teachers have probably had to deal with switching to online teaching due to the pandemic. We all have probably been wondering how to best engage our students in an online learning environment and what other teachers do, which tools and activities work and which do not. The goal of this workshop is:

- To give hands-on tips and tools for online teaching
- To share and exchange experiences and good practices of online teaching and engaging students
- To get practical experience on one tool introduced in the CATAPULT MOOC.
- To exchange best online teaching practices and experiences on student engagement as well as discuss the lessons learnt

The presenters have extensive experience in online teaching and e-pedagogical development. They have been involved in several EU-funded projects developing pedagogical solutions and materials applicable to online teaching. The workshop will present Teaching LSPs MOOC. The MOOC is part of the Erasmus+ funded CATAPULT project (Computer-Assisted Training And Platforms to Upskill Language for Specific Purposes) coordinated by the Sorbonne University. The CATAPULT MOOC is a free open course with materials on how to teach languages in professional and vocational contexts.

Poppy Skarli has been working in the Faculty of Engineering and Business and been teaching professional language and communication skills to ICT students. Since 2017 she has been teaching Academic Writing to the online International Business degree program where she is also acting as an online teacher tutor.

Katriina Vesänen has experience in teaching professional language and communication skills to degree programme students in the Faculty of Health and well-being. She is also a certified Euroolta-Eurovolt Trainer.

To gain the most of this workshop, register for the CATAPULT MOOC which is running from October 12 – December 19, 2020. The duration of the workshop is 60 min.
